Part 1: Jung and phenomenology revisited

Roger Brooke's book Jung and Phenomenology was ground-breaking and in the first part of the afternoon he will present his current thinking on the topic. This is a typical review from the time of its original publication in 1991: 'This book is, quite simply, a brilliant and original phenomenological reading of Jungian psychology' (Christopher Aanstoos in The Humanistic Psychologist).

(Discussant: Mark Saban)

Part 2: The warrior's return: combat experience and the requirements for homecoming

In the second part of the afternoon, Roger will present his acclaimed new work on the archetypal, civic, ethical and social aspects of working with combat veterans on their return home.

Roger Brooke, Ph.D., is Professor of Psychology at Duquesne University, where is also Director of the Military Psychological Services. From 1994-2007 he was Director of Clinical Training at Duquesne. His formative professional years were in South Africa in the 1980s, where he was on faculty at Rhodes University, Grahamstown, and worked with the victims on violence on both sides of the political conflict at the time. He is author of Jung and phenomenology, recently republished as a Classic Edition (Routledge 2015) and was contributing editor of Pathways into the Jungian world(Routledge 1999). He and his oldest son were paratroopers. Home page: rogerbrookephd.com
