Social Dreaming is a way to discover the unconscious life of a community, in this case the wider community of Jungian practitioners represented by members of CAP, and all IAAP analysts.

In social dreaming we gather to speak our dreams, and listen to our dreams. We give our dreams recognition of their own existence, and, by an attitude of listening, through associations, conversations can begin between ourselves and the dreams, and between the dreams, and meanings can unfold.

CAP's membership includes members of the IAAP and psychotherapists, counsellors and arts therapists who have had Jungian analysis and supervision at least to the minimum standards of the IAAP.

This social dreaming will be held by Amélie Noack and James Barrett. Amélie Noack is a Jungian and group analyst who has worked extensively with social dreaming; James Barrett is a Jungian psychotherapist, currently chair of CAP, who is interested in the potential of social dreaming as a meeting place for clinicians.
