

Celebrating C.G. Jung on the 50th anniversary of his death

Association of Jungian Analysts, The Confederation for Analytical Psychology,
The Guild of Pastoral Psychology present

Murray Stein

‘Transcendence – the Missing Fourth’

Thursday 7th April 2011

7.30 pm Wine Reception, 8.15pm Lecture

Essex Church, 112 Palace Gardens Terrace, London W8 4RT

nearest tube Notting Hill Gate

Tickets: £25

AJA, CAP, GPP members £20; students and therapy trainees £15

Murray Stein, Ph.D. is currently President of The International School of Analytical Psychology in Zurich (ISAPZurich). He is the author of In MidLife, Jung's Treatment of Christianity, Jung's Map of the Soul and many other books and articles. He lives in Switzerland and is a training and supervising analyst with ISAPZurich. Murray will be leading workshops in Edinburgh this weekend and is bringing this lecture to London Murray writes:

The feminist theologian Sallie McFague is critical of talk about transcendence. It can be a disguised form of top-down dominance, a patriarchal style of discourse. The one who claims knowledge of the transcendent can trump those who are without such gnosis, and traditional teaching has been used in this way to achieve and to hold dominance. Contrary to this, as she writes, “The ‘view from the body’ is always a view from somewhere versus the view from above, from nowhere; the former admits to its partiality and accepts responsibility for its perspectives, while the latter believes itself universal and transcendent, thus denying its embodiment and limitations as well as the concrete, special insights that can arise only from particularity” (The Body of God, p. 95). The type of strong transcendence I will be speaking about in this lecture, however, is precisely grounded in the body, is concrete and particular rather than an abstract overview from above that claims objectivity and universality. It is transcendence embedded in event, given to a particular subject, deeply related to an individual psyche, and connected to physicality.

SPACE IS LIMITED AND BOOKING IS ESSENTIAL FOR THIS EVENT

Please return this slip with your cheque to; Conference Administrator, KVT Business Care,
Sirius, Setch Road, Blackborough End, nr Kings Lynn, PE23 1SL

Name.....Address.....

.....

I wish to book.....ticket(s) for Murray Stein. Tickets £25 members £20, Students/trainees £15

I/we are members of AJA CAP GPP I/we are students/trainees at

I enclose a cheque made payable to the Guild of Pastoral Psychology for.....